Last week, at the Rectory-house, in Broughton, Lincolnshire, Mrs. Radcliffe. She was not, as erroneously stated, the celebrated authoress of that name, but the mother of Mr. Radcliffe, the husband of that lady; she was also mother of Mrs. Norris, wife of Mr. Norris, solicitor, Beverley, and of Mrs. Burton, wife of the Rev. Mr. Burton, of Broughton, as above.

On Wednesday morning, at four o'clock, at his seat, Grimsthorpe Castle, near Bourn, his Grace Brownlow Bertie, Duke of Ancaster and Kesteven, Marquis and Earl of Lindsey, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county of Lincoln, and Recorder of Boston. His Grace entered into the 79th year of his age on the 1st of May last: he succeeded his nephew, Robert, the preceding Duke, in July, 1779. His Grace having no male issue, by his death the dukedom is extinct: the marquise is also extinct; but the title of Earl of Lindsey devolves upon General Albemarle Bertie, M. P. for the borough of Stamford; unaccompanied, however, by any estate, unless it shall be determined that that of Uffington descends with the title. Grimsthorpe Castle and Park descend to Lord Gwydir, by right of his wife, Lady Willoughby d'Ereby, and, it is believed, will be made the residence of his Lordship's son, the Honourable Peter Burrell, who lately married the heiress of the house of Perth.—The personal property of the Duke (amounting, it is supposed, to a sum exceeding 200,000l.), is chiefly bequeathed to his Grace's grandson, Mr. Colyear, the heir in abeyance of the earldom of Portmore.—The remains of the Duke are to be interred, agreeably to his directions, at Swinstead, where his Grace caused a vault to be made some years ago, and where his wives lie.—The death of the Duke of Ancaster is a subject of real sorrow to hundreds: His Grace was the common benefactor of whomsoever lived around him; and, as a landlord, was regarded as indisputably the best in England. Very few of those who held farms on the extensive domain of the Duke, have had their rents advanced during the 80 years in which his Grace was their landlord.

Saturday se'nnight, at Gainsborough, Mrs. Clulow, wife of Mr. Clulow, landlord of the Bull's Head Inn.

On Friday se'nnight, at his house in Charles-street, Berkeley-square, London, Lawrence Dundas Campbell, Esq. Editor of the Asiatic Annual Register, and Author of several publications on East India affairs.

On board his Majesty's ship Resolution, on the 18th ult. on her passage from Corunna, of the wounds he received in the action of the 16th of January, Captain Duncan Campbell:—And on the 27th ult. at Plymouth Dock, on his return with the army from Spain, Major Archibald Argyle Campbell, both of the 42d Royal Highlanders.

Last week, at Linstead, in Suffolk, at a very advanced age, Mr. Robert Denny, farmer. This person's character was very singular, as he scarcely allowed himself the common necessaries of life, though he died worth upwards of 15,000l. He has, however, left a numerous offspring, which sum he has bequeathed to them.
